He is an able officer and by hard work has acquired a good professional knowledge. He has successfully commanded a squadron under the most trying battle conditions and his men were well disciplined. His professional knowledge as a surveyor has been of great use in all topographical matters and his unerring guiding of columns over unknown country in the dark and fog has ensured the success of many important operations. He was recommended by the Intelligence School at Harrow for employment in I(A). He has been of great assistance as Intelligence officer with the Brigade especially on offensive operations. He has some knowledge of Arabic. He has gone through the war without being sick
